A 2010 survey of 28,000 Massachusetts residents found that 1 in 200 people identify as transgender. That means it is more likely to be transgender than to have total color blindness.

At least 41% of transgender people in the US have attempted suicide, compared to 2.9% of the general population.

In a survey of 6,450 transgender people, 26% were fired because of their gender identity or expression.

In 2003, The National School Climate Survey found that 55% of transgender youth have been attacked. 78% reported being verbally harassed.

In 2001, 90% of transgender youth reported feeling unsafe in school due to their gender expression.

Approximately 20% of transgender individuals are homeless, compared to just 1% of the general population.
